Description

This rural scene includes four cabins in the background, one a double cabin with two front doors (upper left). Lines of colorful clothing are stretched between the cabins. In the center foreground an African American man and woman face each other, hands held forward toward one another. Behind the woman (right) is a young girl in a purple patterned dress who appears less happy than other figures in the painting, given her expression and downward tilted head. To girl's right is a small black dog, present in many of Scott's rural scenes. To the far left of the man are figures of a boy and girl playing or dancing. The scene also includes three chickens, a pair of ducks and a black and white spotted dog or cat.
